OH HOW HUMBLE ARE "STRIKERS!"

Once Unruly Convicts Now the Meekest in the Land.

BOW BEFORE THE WARDEN

SURRENDER AFTER HOURS OF "STRINGING UP."

shadow of a smile about his lips, Warden Arthur Pratt declared last even ing that he had the most orderly household in Utah. In proof thereof he invited a couple of visitors to accompany him to the scene of the previous night's

The party entered the prison gates and proceeded to the lower north tier of the south cell house. The appearance of the tier was much the same as the night before. There were the closed doors, the twenty grim "bull locks," the guards placidly making their rounds, a trusty moving here and there, but the noise was gone. The silence was almost oppressive by con-trast with the racket of Wednesday night, which would have put to shame a boiler factory and a Sloux war dance combined. But for the warden's complacent remarks, the more than Sab-bath stillness of the building was unbroken.

"Where have you got 'em?" one of the visitors asked.

"Right there where they were last night," replied the warden.
It was true. There they were. They might have been dead men for all the noise they made. The raucous voices that wrecked the slumber of the inthat wrecked the slumber of the inmates of the penitentiary and dis-turbed the peace and quietude of the whole neighborhood a few hours before were stilled. The "strikers" spake not,

In brief, they had "got theirs." The "strike," as a strike, was over. The fun, as far as the convicts were concerned, had ended. There will be consequences however and that the conquences, however, and the terms settlement are now being figured out by Warden Pratt.

Meek Now, These Bad Men.

'I take it that discipline has been stored," remarked the visitor. "You may so take it," said the warden. "If you want actual proof, wait here a few minutes until the men come to their supper, and tell me if you ever saw a better-behaved crowd in your life."

ever saw a better-behaved crowd in your life."

A moment or two later the gong sounded and all the cell doors in the building, except those occupied by the "strikers," swung outward. Over 100 men formed in line with folded arms and silently filed through the corridors and into the wining room. The warden and his visitors occupied seats on a raised platform near the door. The men passed by without a sound, a murmur or a suspicious move of any mature. Occasionally one would lift his eyes to the warden's face, but there was never a suspicion of rebellion or mutiny in any glance. Gravely the men aligned themselves along the tables, the gong sounded again, they seated themselves and without a word began to eat their meal.

"Well, how does it look?" inquired the warden.

The visitors hastened to assure him that the behavior of his guests was all that the most exacting stickler for etiquette could demand.

"Um." said the warden. "Yes, we are led to believe things are rather office, 122 East Brigham.

Thus, it will be seen, the "strikers" have, in fact, escaped several days' work during the hot weather, but it requires no prophet nor a son of a prophet to predict that oasis in the desert never looked so good to weary traveler as will the shops look to the twenty "srikers" when they are at twenty "srikers" when they are at twenty "srikers" when they are at the prophet to predict that oasis in the desert never looked so good to weary traveler as will the shops look to the twenty "srikers" when they are at twenty "srikers" when they are at twenty "srikers" when they are at the prophet to predict that oasis in the desert never looked so good to weary traveler as will the shops look to the twenty "srikers" when they are at twenty "srikers" of age will not be admitted, an-

SUSIE RUSSELL, REMARKABLE CHILD SINGER, MAKES HER FIRST PUBLIC APPEARANCE

Perched on a chair with her head tocked on one side and an expression of genuine happiness on her face, little cleven-year-old Susie Russell chirped like a bird last evening to the great enjoyment of the company that gathered in the studio of Mrs. Martha Royle King in the Commercial club building. The occasion was a little musicale given by a number of the pupils of Mrs. King, among them Miss Hallie Poster, Miss Edith Godbe and Miss Helen Receil Edith Godbe and Helen Re against him.

Wood works at times about the Lincoln House. He has been under arrest before. Last evening the two detectives found him trying to sell a type-writer in a Commercial street pawnshop. He hadn't the ear-marks of a stenographer, and the detectives investigated. Wood produced a bill of sale, from an old friend, he claimed. But he didn't know the name of the signer and guessed it wrong. His arrest followed, and then came more conflicting statements from the prisoner. The police are looking for a place minus a machine.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

"Strikers" Have Long Session.

The twenty "strikers" remained "strung up" until breakfast time yesterday morning, when they were lowered long enough to swallow their meagre allowance of bread and water. When "stringing up" time arrived again, two of the men weakened and surrendered. Eighteen remained, obdurate, however, and were promptly handcuffed to the walls of their celis again.

But they were not so noisy as before. Twelve hours is quite a stretch of time when one stands barefooted on an unfeeling steel floor with arms handcuffed to the wall about the level of one's eyes. Further, shouting is dry work, especially when water is scarce and is available only at long intervals. Nor do these conditions increase one's desire to kick the wall or to hammer with handcuffes.

As the day wore on signs of approach as the bill at Itah.
